"EMPTY HEADS"

ADVERTISING AND PUBLICITY LETTER NO. 4278

Release No. 175

A GAMBOL COMEDY

November 11, 1924.

With Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance

Cliff and Virginia are newly-weds and as a wedding present Cliff's uncle gives them a house and lot provided they get into the house before his sister arrives.

Uncle writes to his sister telling her that the house goes to Cliff unless she gets there first. Sister and her slick lawyer set out to prevent Cliff and Virginia getting into the house.

Cliff and Virginia pack their newly acquired house-hold goods into a van and start for the house, towing father in his patent wheel chair with a kicker attachment.

They arrive and get the furniture in, when the old maid and her lawyer arrive. There is a free-for-all fight that makes Gettysburg look like a ping-pong party, and after all of the furniture has been smashed uncle arrives on the scene with the cheering information that they have moved into the wrong house.

"Those that like slap-stick will find plenty of laughs here", says the New York Film Curb.

The popularity of these slap-stick, rough-and-tumble comedies is proven by the reception they are getting in theatres throughout the land. These little fun pictures are proving mighty acceptable.
